This is pretty cool. Reporter (and sometime OTM guest host) Rick Karr filmed a short doc about hardware hackers in NYC.

It's worth watching all the way through -- you get to sneak inside NYC Resistor, a New York City hackerspace, and also, you get to watch a 3D printer in action. That's a printer that prints objects. Objects like Stephen Colbert's head fused onto the body of an American bald eagle:

What? I know. Check out the full video below:
